Down the Potomac-Singing

Hunting for Cool Breezes Up and Festival a Success.

Thousands of Washington's inhabitants took advantage of the many facilities for getting out of the city and away from the baking streets yesterday, and every means possible was brought into use to carry the sweltering public to places of coolness and rest. All the street car lines that run into the suburbs were crowded to suffocation, and the country around the capital abounded in pleasure parties bent on seeking some cool, shady spot to spend the afternoon. The mercury began to mount up early in the morning, and by 4 o'clock in the afternoon had reached 93. Of course, this was not so noticeable in the country or down the river, where there are no concrete streets to hold the heat and send it steaming up again into the air, but in town a great many people suffered from the sudden change in the weather.

The car lines to the Zoo and adjacent country, Mt. Vernon and up the river to Glen Echo were patronized to their full capacity, while about every one who could beg, borrow or steal a wheel was out on the road. Cabin John, Overlook Inn, the Soldiers' Home and the hundreds of other delightful places around Washington were the objective roints, and were blossed for the objective points, and were blessed for the cool breezes and shady places and comfort which are to be found there.

Planked shad at Marshall Hall proved one of the chief attractions of the day, and an immense number took advantage of the opportunity to get away from the city and at the same time enjoy that toothsome at the same time enjoy that toothsome dainty. A number rode on the ferry boats to Alexandria and back merely for the trip, and others to a considerable number patronized the Pentz and her objective point, River View. Sail boats on the river were in the majority over every other kind of in the majority over every other kind of craft, while on the upper Potomac boating was one of the attractions of the day. If yesteroay's heat did nothing else, it went to show that it is hard to find a place better fitted than Washington with the means of getting away from the heat of the streets and the noise of the city, and with really pleasurable places to go to.

Singing Festival.

The Arion Singing Society, one of the best-known German-American societies of Washington, gave its annual singing festival at beautiful River View yesterday. These singing festivals of the German organizations are patterned as much as possible after the musical festivals of the fatherland, where German music is played, German hymns and choruses sung and German hymns and choruses sung and German games played. Yesterday was essentially German day at River View, and over lifteen hundred took advantage of the beautiful day to make a trip to the pretty resort on the steamer Pentz. The weather was delightful at River View, the cool lawns and shady nooks making inviting spots to while away the long, hot hours of the afternoon. An elaborate musical program was rendered by the society, assisted by Chris. Arth's fine orchestra. Several by Chris. Arth's fine orchestra. Several prize bowling contests were inaugurated, and high scores were the order of the day and high scores were the order of the day. The special attraction at River View, however, was the chute, which will be soon completed, and nearly every one of the excursionists paid a visit to its height and took in the magnificent view obtainable from the top of the platform.

The spring and summer campaign for outdoor work, under the auspices of the Central Union Mission, began yesterday. The larger of the two gospel wagons went to Foggy Bottom, 26th and G streets northwest, and Washington Circle, and both wagons were at Market space. Mr. E. D. Bailey was in charge of the services, and Mr. Havell was leader of music. Representative C. G. Martin of North Carolina went to all the meetings and spoke twice. The audiences were very large, especially at Washington Circle and Market space. At the latter meeting addresses were made by Representatives Morse and Martin, Mr. Bailey and Mr. Robinson of the Pacific Garden Missions, Chicago, Mr. Morse's address was mainly based on the fifty-fifth chapter of Isaiah, but he di-gressed enough to blame the saloons for the character, and awakened a religious fervor and enthusiasm beyond what even mission meetings generally experience.

It is the intention of Mr. Bailey to ask Dr. Taimage to speak on Market space, and also, if possible, to have some of the prominent business men and ministers address meetings generally experience. the crowds there during the warm weather:
